DIAGNOSTIC TOOLS

The Staff Engagement and Wellbeing Survey (SEWS) is an essential cultural assessment survey tool for departments and organisations.

It is based on the latest quality research into what type of factors in an employee's experience lead them to contribute most effectively to organisational performance.

SEWS enables you to simply measure and develop the ways in which you can make your workplace somewhere that is maximally innovative and productive – in a sustainable way.

Through clear graphs and recommendations, SEWS provides your organisation or department with feedback from employees at all levels of the extent to which they experience the key factors that drive engagement and wellbeing, and how engaged they currently are.

The output is designed such that it is accessible for everyone, and empowers teams at all levels throughout your organisation to be able to take action to improve their experience and effectiveness. This design increases your ability to benefit from enhanced performance immediately, and minimise the cost of external resources that might be needed to act on a typical survey.

Benefits of using the Staff Engagement and Wellbeing Survey

You can tailor SEWS questions in terms of specific workplace factors you want to enquire about, in relation to your strategic objectives, and in the outcomes you want to achieve. This means that it will address issues that are specific to you, right now.

Statistically-analysed data is provided which shows specifically for your organisation or department what would be the quickest and least expensive means by which you can achieve desired outcomes that you have specified in tailored outcome measures (e.g. increased job satisfaction, pride in the organisation, reduced stress).

An expert-facilitated feedback session is provided to help you action plan how to identify and address causes of positive and negative outcomes both for short and long-term gains in productivity and engagement.
